The geographical region of the Great Basin is a vast, arid region of the western United States characterized by its internal drainage, meaning that water flows into the area but doesn't drain out to the ocean. The first people of the land adapted to the region's climate by developing unique hunting and gathering strategies. Still today, the Great Basin Tribes are known for their resilience, flexibility, and adaptability in the face of challenging environmental conditions.

Background

The Department of Native American Affairs (DNAA) is a State agency established by statute as a result of the 2023 Nevada Legislative cycle (NRS 233A), it was preceded by the Nevada Indian Commission starting in 1965 to address matters affecting the social and economic welfare of American Indians residing in Nevada. This includes issues related to Indian affairs and federal and state control, responsibility, policy, and operations impacting such individuals. Initially called the Nevada Indian Commission, it was created to mediate Tribal-State relations and to address Tribal concerns and issues with the Governor.

DNAA activities focus on fostering cooperation and enhancing communication between Tribes, the State, local governments, and related public agencies. Their mission is to improve education, employment, health, well-being, and the socio-economic status of Nevada's American Indian residents, while also supporting Tribal sovereignty, economic opportunities, and community development.

The department functions as a liaison between the State and the 20 federally recognized Tribes, which include 28 Tribal communities. DNAA assists State agencies and Tribes on matters affecting Nevada's American Indian population and provides a platform for considering American Indian needs and issues. It acts as a conduit for channeling concerns related to Native American Indians or Tribal interests through the appropriate network and serves as a point of access for Tribes to learn about Nevada State government programs and policies.

During his tenure, Nevada Governor Steve Sisolak signed AB44 into law which formally established the Stewart Indian School Cultural Center & Museum in statute and provided an operating budget, plus he signed AB270 which provided for the director to designate certain buildings and grounds for special events.

Planning Process

The DNAA initiated strategic planning in the Spring 2025, following a positive Nevada Legislative session for the Native American community. This session resulted in several significant achievements, including the creation of the Nevada Tribal Health Authority and gaining a seat on the Silver State Health Insurance Exchange Board of Directors, which was a monumental step towards ensuring that the healthcare needs of the Native American community are adequately represented and addressed at the state level.

The DNAA Executive Director Stacey Montooth scheduled a public meeting on June 17, which was well-attended by key stakeholders including the Nevada Indian Commissioners, department staff, and various public participants who joined via ZOOM. The meeting underscored the department's commitment to transparency and inclusive decision-making processes.

Under the guidance of Dr. Joshua Bonde, the attendees conducted a comprehensive PESTEL analysis to evaluate external political, economic, social, technological, environmental, and legal factors that could pose risks or create opportunities for the department's initiatives. This analysis helped in identifying potential challenges and areas for growth.

Furthermore, the department identified essential stakeholders to provide feedback on the strategic plan. These included tribal leaders, community organizations, healthcare providers, educators, and other relevant parties whose insights were crucial in shaping a responsive and effective strategy.

By involving these groups, the department aimed to ensure that the strategic plan would be holistic and reflective of the diverse needs and aspirations of the Native American community in Nevada.

Strategic Vision

The DNAA strategic planning team is excited to establish the first strategic plan for this new executive-level department. Over the next five years, the team aims to enhance the voice of Native Americans in Nevada government. With the drive of the staff and support from stakeholders and the community, their ambitious vision is achievable.

The strategic plan includes several key initiatives designed to empower Native American communities and ensure their representation in policy-making processes. Among these initiatives are participation in advisory committees comprised of Native American leaders, the development of programs tailored to address specific issues faced by these communities, and the promotion of cultural awareness and accuracy within government operations.

The first modern day powwow at the Stewart Indian School was held in 1990. It has been an annual celebration on Father's Day weekend ever since. The 3-day, free, public event brings together Native American dancers, drummers, artists, and crafters to celebrate our heritage.

Additionally, the department plans to collaborate with educational institutions to create opportunities for Native American youths, such as scholarships and internships. Economic development will also be a priority, with efforts focusing on supporting Native-owned businesses and fostering partnerships that benefit Tribal economies.

As part of the strategic plan, the department is committed to regular assessments and transparent reporting to measure progress and adapt strategies as needed. By building strong relationships with Tribal governments and ensuring active participation in decision-making, the department aims to create lasting positive impacts for Native Americans in Nevada.

Strategic Goals

The strategic planning group convened to discuss their priorities collectively. These priorities include the need for training programs, raising awareness about the DNAA, encouraging greater civic engagement within the community, conserving the Stewart Indian School and its legacy, and promoting increased inter-Tribal partnerships. This feedback forms the foundation for establishing the guiding goals of the Department for the next five years.

The goals are detailed with specific, attainable objectives, strategies for achieving these objectives, and measures of success. They are intended to serve as institutional drivers. Furthermore, the goals are designed to be adaptable; in the event that priorities shift or new opportunities emerge over the next five years, the goals must remain flexible. The group unanimously agreed that the plan should be considered a living document.

- + PROVIDE INFORMATION AND TRAINING ON STATE CONSULTATION
- + COMMUNICATION AND MARKETING
- + ADVISORY BOARDS
- + STEWART INDIAN SCHOOL
- + INTERTRIBAL PARTNERSHIP

At least 20,320 Native American children lived at Stewart during the 90-years of which the United States government operated an Indian Boarding School at the site. When the school abruptly shuttered in 1980, the State of Nevada took over jurisdiction of half the original property. Besides the Department of Native American Affairs, five other state agencies are based on campus including corrections, buildings and grounds, capital police, public safety, and the Police Officers Standard Training (POST).

Goal 1: Provide Information, Training on State Consultation

The planning group identified that consultation was one of the most important functions for which the DNAA was created. Effectively the DNAA is to act as an intermediary between State and Local governments and Tribal governments. There is an inconsistent approach to consultation, ranging from sending a letter to true relationship building, and consensus building. Through following the course of actions below; this goal is meant to provide a platform for state government to learn how to consult with Tribal governments, and for Tribal governments to learn how to provide meaningful input into state policy.

Further as required by NRS, the annual Governor's State-Tribal Summit is meant to be an opportunity for the Nevada Governor to learn about issues affecting American Indian residents of the state, and an opportunity for the Tribal governments to learn about state-based initiatives which will impact Tribal communities.

Through the goals outlined below, a better foundation for communication between Tribal and non-Tribal governments can be facilitated and through time established.

Goal 2: Communications and Marketing

The DNAA strategic planning group noted there is a misconception in the Tribal community about what exactly is the responsibility and work of the DNAA. This goal is meant to increase communication between the DNAA and American Indians residing in Nevada. Through increased communication and feedback the DNAA can be more receptive and attentive to the needs and goals of the Indigenous people meant to be served by the Department.

Goal: Annual Survey

+Strategic Plan:

- + Build annual survey to be distributed amongst Tribal stakeholders and leaders asking what sort of help they need from DNAA in dealing with state government
- + Administer the survey, collect and compile the results
- + Analyze to see how DNAA, through its actions, is impacting Tribal communities across the State

+Benchmark of Success:

- + Year 1 construct survey
- + Year 2 administer first survey electronically, subsequent years paper surveys can be considered if requested

Goal 3: Advisory Boards

In 2024 election turnout was down over almost every demographic group, with the exception of Native Americans. Native American election participation saw a dramatic increase and was the highest increase in participation of any other group. This pattern has been noticed by policy makers, who would like to better understand how this trend happened. Here we acknowledge the importance of engagement and aim to get more Native Americans involved in civic engagement. We also strive to be more proactive and send a representative of the planning group to DNAA related advisory board meetings to actively participate in the business of these committees and to see how the DNAA can be more responsive in real time.

Composed of 20 stops, the Stewart Indian School Trail is 0.6 miles on paved surfaces winding throughout the 63 buildings that still stand on these historic grounds. Explore and experience this interactive cell phone guided tour, highlighting key historic buildings and landmarks across the campus. Audio is of Native American elders, most who attended the Indian boarding school. The trail audio also is available using QR codes and at <https://stewartindianschool.com/walking-trail/>.

Goal 4: Preservation, Promotion of Stewart Indian School

The Stewart Indian School was a Native American boarding school operated by the federal government from 1890 to 1980. The Indian boarding schools are notorious for the harsh early years and militaristic style of forced assimilation. In the post World War 2 era, the late 1940s, the campus environment evolved and the government embraced Native American culture as for some of the 20,300+ Native children it ended up being a desirable place to attend high school. Preserving and telling that complicated story is part of NRS 233A. Ownership of part of the school property was given to the state via a quit-claim by the federal government.

Goal: Investigate Nevada Revised Statute Legal Authorities Surrounding Stewart Campus

+Strategic Plan:

- + Year 1-2 research NRS property history since 1980 to assess the legal ownership and property lines.
- + Year 2-3 determine controlling agencies and rolls of DNAA and sister agencies on the property.
- + Year 2-5 formulate management plan of the 110 acre campus and historic structures which fits within the legal authority

+Benchmark of Success:

- + Year 2 have property surveyed and boundaries clearly marked
- + Year 3 create a policy manual on different agencies and their obligations on the campus

- + Ongoing, if logistically possible, fundraise for and conduct survey

+Benchmark of Success:

- + Year 1, write report detailing possibility of conducting survey
- + Ongoing, if feasible conduct the survey once funding is available
- + Year 5 and ongoing complete and update survey report of results

According the National Native American Boarding School Healing Coalition (NABS), the truth about the U.S. Indian boarding school policy has largely been written out of the history books. There were more than 526 government-funded, (often church-run) Indian Boarding schools across the United States in the 19th and 20th centuries including the Stewart Indian Boarding School. American Indian children were forcibly abducted by government agents, sent to schools hundreds of miles away, and beaten, starved, or otherwise abused when they spoke their Native languages. Over 200 Tribal communities throughout the region have ties to Stewart. It was initially known as the Carson Indian Training School before the official name changed to honor of U.S. Senator William Morris Stewart. Other names it was known by include Stewart Institute, Carson Industrial School, and Carson Indian School.

Goal 5: Intertribal Events

The strategic planning committee identified a need to host and facilitate more intertribal events for the Great Basin Tribes to foster good relationships and cooperation between all of our people.

- + Bring in at least 200 registered dancers a year
- + Identify donors to help make the powwow financially self-sufficient
- + Year 2-5, increase vendor participation until a maximum sustainability is identified

Goal: Plan, Execute Nevada Tribes Legislative Day

+Strategic Plan:

- + Every biennium (odd years) plan, execute Nevada Tribes Legislative Day
- + Identify the most pressing political topics of the session for the Native community and have an education session on those issues and related proposed legislation

+Benchmarks of Success:

- + Odd years host Nevada Tribes Legislative Day
- + Ongoing, identify political topics of most importance to communities in Nevada

Goal: Examine Restarting American Indian Achievement Awards Banquet & Silent Auction

+Strategic Plan:

- + Year 1 determine if Tribal communities have the desire for restarting the annual Achievement Awards event
- + Year 2 if feedback is not favorable identify some sort of other intertribal function to plan
- + Year 2 if feedback is positive, begin planning Achievement Awards function for even years or non-legislative years
- + Year 3 identify venue and plan
- + Year 3 execute Achievement Awards event

+Benchmark of success:

- + Year 1 sending out survey to see what the desire is for the event and compile that data
- + Year 3 venue booked and event executed
- + If data is not favorable abort before end of year 2

Native Americans are the guardians of the environment often leading the way to a healthier Mother Earth. The core of our Indigenous being is the environment because for our Native people it is not just a place, but the most vital part of our culture, spirituality, and survival.
